Recording with Panopto Recorder

You can access Panopto outside of course site as well, and use to record and share your recordings.

Before you get started - here is a video on how to deliver course lectures.

How to Record a Video

Please note: You will need to have a camera and microphone on your machine to record a video.

To make your first recording associated with your course, go to the Panopto block in course site and click on the "course setting" links to open the default Panopto folder for your course. This will authenticate you automatically and make sure your video is associated with the correct course. Download the Panopto recorder if prompted.

OR

If working on video not associated with a course,

1. To make your first recording, you can go to https://go.lehigh.edu/panopto and log in with your Lehigh credentials. Download the Panopto recorder.
2. You can then either open the recorder separately OR click on the create button in the Panopto website and select "Record a new session".
   - The Panopto recorder will then open.
3. Verify that you are in the correct folder.
   - The folder drop down will include any courses for which you are granted access. If you have already provisioned your course for Panopto, select your course folder so that you students have access to your recordings.
   - If you select your course folder, your videos will automatically load into your course and be available in the Panopto block in lower right under “course recordings” heading.

4. Name your video or lecture.
   - The Session is the name of the recording, i.e., Lecture 1. The session name is required and will default to the day, date, and time. You can change this later if needed.

5. Make sure you have the appropriate primary video and audio source picked.

6. Once you have the settings as you want them, click the Start Recording button.

7. Minimize Panopto recorder, and open the content you would like present and begin.

PLEASE experiment and do a test video first to make sure your settings are correct!
